

Dr. Colizza is originally from Winnipeg and completed medical school at the University of Manitoba. She moved to Calgary for her core IM residency and GIM Fellowship training. She completed her Addiction Medicine Fellowship in Vancouver, along with the Canadian Addiction Medicine Research Fellowship. Currently, she is the medical director of the Addiction Recovery and Community Health (ARCH) program in Calgary at the Peter Lougheed Centre (PLC), as well as the GIM site co-lead. She works as an addiction medicine and GIM attending at the PLC and is a Clinical Assistant Professor with the University of Calgary.

She has won multiple awards for leadership and teaching including the inaugural Department of Medicine Citizenship award and recent Excellence in Clinical Teaching Award. She is also a strong advocate for people who use drugs, co-authoring op-eds, collaborating on media, and participating in community education, committees, and action.